On a hot summer day in a coastal village in Oman, Ali and his friends decided to go to the sea to search for seashells. While they were exploring the rocky shore, they saw Ali's uncle, Ahmed, who was in trouble with his old fishing boat near the shore. The boat was filled with water, and Ahmed was in a horrible situation. Without hesitation, the friends quickly found a strong rope on the beach and used it to rescue Ahmed. They tied the rope to a large rock and bravely swam into the water. They reached Ahmed's boat and pulled it safely, saving Ahmed from a dangerous situation. The brave act of Ali and his friend became well-known in the village, and everyone celebrated their heroism. Mr Tarek, the local Wali awarded the four friends gold medals for their courage in a special ceremony. The friends learned that helping others is a noble thing to do and felt even closer as friends. What they did also inspired others in the village to be helpful and brave.
